

A Theory And A Prediction

Part of my brain believes that Donald “where’s the birth certificate?” Trump is acting on behalf of Hillary Clinton. She and Bill Clinton hate Obama with a passion, of course, yet she cannot very well challenge a sitting president of her own party without enraging the far left and the black voters she would need to win in 2012. She simply cannot do that.

But if someone else attacks Obama and exposes him, Hillary can then jump in to “save the party” after it becomes obvious that Obama will either lose big time (or is headed for impeachment or jail). Hillary needs Trump as her attack dog because the likely GOP candidates are all pansies who don’t have the courage to fight Obama head on—and she cannot wait for any of them to grow a pair. (She certainly is not going to wait until 2016 for her rendezvous with history.)

So Hillary made a deal with Trump. (No, I don't know what the deal is. Maybe it's just a favor from a man who hates what Obama is doing to the nation.) At any rate, Trump is the eager hatchet man who certainly seems to be enjoying the attention, and Hillary clearly could not be doing what he is doing (much as she might like to).

After Obama disintegrates and Hillary rides to the rescue, Trump simply fades away from the GOP race, either voluntarily or because he himself starts falling in the polls. Clinton–Manchin then goes on to defeat Romney–Pawlenty in 2012.

Of course, I'd much rather see Clinton–Manchin lose to Ryan–West...
