

Doogie Howser For ObamaCare

If you notice that television programs are particularly bad between October 19-25, it's because the shows' producers have been asked to "Organically create and produce as many stories as possible about service and volunteerism and connect them in the plots of network drama, comedies, and reality shows" for that week. Guess what those service topics might be? Environmentalism, health care, education, the economy! If you notice your favorite television characters suddenly urging each other to "reduce their carbon footprint" or "support national health care legislation," you'll know where it came from.

Here's the story:

Apparently it's not enough for Obama to have continual obsequious coverage from in-the-tank reporters and commentators, like Chris "tingle up my leg" Matthews—no, he's also got to have Doogie Howser pushing ObamaCare and Monica and Phoebe advocating "cap and trade" legislation. (Okay, those shows are off the air but you know what I mean.)

If right about now you are feeling, "I'm mad as Hell and I'm not going to take it any longer," I suggest a ban on watching television the week of October 19-25. Let the networks' in-the-toilet ratings that week keep them from making leftist government propaganda an even more common occurrence than it already is. The worst that can happen is that you will miss some incredibly bad programming.
