

Hold The Bows

On April 15, the day Obama signed into law the budget deal that purportedly reduced spending by $38.5 billion, the national debt rose an additional $34.54 billion. Those who argue that the budget deal was significant—including Obama and members of Congress in both political parties—should be reminded that they cut the equivalent of about one day of federal borrowing.

They should hold their bows until they repeat the process an additional 364 times.

*Don Fredrick
April 20, 2011*