Here's a peek down the DemocRAT hole.

Subject: Is Donald Trump a Bilderberger?

Information collected by Bob Lunsford!

Sure looks like the Democrats, with Hillary & Co., want to paint Trump as a Bilderberger. However, I did a Startpage.com search for: "Is Donald Trump a Bilderberger?" and got the following hits — on the first page alone. What the Democrats/Leftroids want the most for Trump is a great recommendation for him. It's an "enemy of my enemy" sort of thing.

Bob Lunsford also says: "By the way, the same effort by the Left is to also paint Trump as a member of the Illuminati which can also be disproved easily by doing a <http://www.startpage.com/> search. The Left/Democrats are leaving no possibility out of their efforts to undo Trump in his way to the White House. They lose more sleep dreaming up ways to dismantle and destroy the country than any enemy the country may have. They are indeed — The Enemy Within —"

JT: After reading the articles, my opinion is I don't think Donald Trump is a Bilderberg member. He doesn't have to be. He doesn't need them. That may be the reason they are united against him. The Bilderbergers have too much to lose.

I am wary of Bloomberg and Infowars. Some of the information is good, some of it is anti-Jewish (particularly Infowars), which I don't like.

There was no reporting in the German media about the meeting of the Bilderberg Group at the hotel Taschenbergpalais Kempinski in Dresden, Germany, where the Bilderberg conference took place from June 9-12, 2016.

JT: The following is from Jim O'Neill. He writes for The Canada Free Press. See <http://canadafreepress.com/members/1/JimONEill/157>

ADM "Ace" Lyons, myself, and many others have suspected (known) this to be the real reason behind the Benghazi clusterf--k years ago. It would have been pulled off without a hitch too -- except (1) the Benghazi compound's American Global Response Staff (GRS) disobeyed orders and went to rescue the Americans at the annex and, (2) the use of diesel fuel instead of gasoline.

"Don't shoot we're from Morsi." Excuse me? A botched kidnap attempt is really the only scenario where all the pieces fit. Obama being worried about getting reelected is BS -- even the arms to Syria is a red herring (though true). Jim

Time to bring back this huge REALITY! See below how many sources there are for the TRUTH ABOUT BENGHAZI!!! - some as recent as a few months ago. ONE of TWO full pages below. Time to start moving this around the Net again. Voters need to understand what a treasonous act this was - wholly-owned by Hillary, Huma, Jarrett, Rice and Barry from Indonesia temporarily occupying our American White House. This wasn't just 'known by all of the above DAYS before the event.' This was part of Barry's & Hillary's political agenda for at least a year before 9-11-12 - only 60 days before the general election. Barry needed a Rose Garden SHOW. A spectacle of trading off Stevens for Blind Sheik Rahman was the perfect ploy to further cement Barry's re-election bid. It all 'went down in flames' for the pathetic reason that the operative on the ground brought diesel fuel to light the fire that was intended to drive the occupants of the compound out into the courtyard. Had regular gasoline been used, the kidnapping would have happened and Barry would have been given his anticipated Rose Garden ceremony - like Clinton with Rabin and Arafat.....or earlier, Carter with Begin and Sadat. Barry needed his equally memorable 'moment in the Sun' exhibiting gracious magnanimity. The local yokel who was tasked with providing the fuel for the fire dashed Barry's big show. It's always THE LITTLE THINGS.....ISN'T IT? Barry thinks to himself 'DANG'!

JT: The political mastermind Barack Hussein Obama is a traitor! He must be immediately impeached for treason, found guilty and sentenced in the manner that traitors must face.

On August 13 Breitbart.com writes, “An undercover report has revealed some of the tactics migrants use to game Germany’s immigration system, and that 80 per cent of those seeking asylum in the country have no papers. Abdullah Khan, who worked four months undercover at a reception centre, reported how large numbers of migrants use fake documents and lie so as to qualify for as many taxpayer-funded benefits as possible. ...The federal police found that eight out of ten migrants seeking asylum in Germany come without any identification papers. Mr. Khan reported that the majority claim to have lost their documents ‘while fleeing,’ and claim to be Syrian as this gives them the best chance of being granted ‘refugee’ status. Ninety-six per cent of migrants claiming to be from Syria were awarded refugee status by the government in 2015. In his four months working undercover Mr. Khan was outraged to discover many asylum applications from people claiming to be Syrian were accepted without even an interview.”

Hacked Emails Confirm NATO Push To Provoke, Escalate Conflict With Russia

July 2, 2016

From Zerohedge:

Hacked emails reveal that U.S. Air Force General Philip Breedlove, until recently the supreme commander of NATO forces in Europe, is not only semi-illiterate but he also plotted in private to overcome President Barack Obama's reluctance to escalate military tensions with Russia over the war in Ukraine in 2014, posted on a new website called DC Leaks.

<http://www.zerohedge.com/news/2016-07-01/hacked-emails-confirm-nato-push-provoke-escalate-conflict-russia>

"ThanX Haz....I have a worry to ask you about....Derr, sorry, Hazza, I have, an ask to worry you, about...POTUS won't let me press the red, button....and go full out global nuke meltdown, with Russia .., So my ask to you is to swing your say around POTUS....okay the red button and max the nukes asap....Gotya, Haz....

It's unreal. How can Philip Breedlove, who makes most five-year-olds look like experts in punctuation, be the head of NATO? Is the criteria for being appointed head of NATO inverted? I mean, do you have to belong to the 0.00001 percentile who have an IQ in the minus range to become NATO head? How else are Breedlove's emails to be explained? The guy seems to be a flesh and blood zombie. But this is not a Dr. Strangelove film, but real life."

Rich,

Here's the text of the message. I'm available to talk at any time.

Thanks,

Jonas

Dear Hillary,

A serious situation has arisen in Albania which needs urgent attention at senior levels of the US government. You may know that an opposition demonstration in Tirana on Friday resulted in the deaths of three people and the destruction of property. There are serious concerns about further unrest connected to a counter-demonstration to be organized by the governing party on Wednesday and a follow-up event by the opposition two days later to memorialize the victims. The prospect of tens of thousands of people entering the streets in an already inflamed political environment bodes ill for the return of public order and the country's fragile democratic process.

I believe two things need to be done urgently:

1. Bring the full weight of the international community to bear on Prime Minister Berisha and opposition leader Edi Rama to forestall further public demonstrations and to tone down public pronouncements.
2. Appoint a senior European official as a mediator.

While I am concerned about the rhetoric being used by both sides, I am particularly worried about the actions of the Prime Minister. There is videotape of National Guard members firing on demonstrators from the roof of the Prime Ministry. The Prosecutor (appointed by the Democratic Party) has issued arrest warrants for the individuals in question. The Prime Minister had previously accused the opposition of intentionally murdering these activists as a provocation. After the tape came out deputies from his party accused the Prosecutor of planning a coup d'etat in collaboration with the opposition, a charge Mr. Berisha repeated today. No arrests have been made as of this writing.

The demonstration resulted from opposition protests over the conduct of parliamentary elections in 2009. The political environment has deteriorated ever since and is now approaching levels of 1997, when similar issues caused the country to slide into anarchy and violence. There are signs that Edi Rama's control of his own people is slipping, which may lead to further violence.

The US and the EU must work in complete harmony over this, but given Albania's European aspirations the EU must take the lead. That is why I suggest appointing a mediator such as Carl Bildt, Martti Ahtisaari or Miroslav Lajcak, all of whom have strong connections to the Balkans.

My foundation in Tirana is monitoring the situation closely and can provide independent analysis of the crisis.

Thank you,

George Soros

Albania Opposition Vows Protest Amid Fears of Violence
Albania opposition leader Edi Rama says he will go ahead with plans to hold a peaceful protest on Friday despite appeals from the EU and the US to cancel the gathering after riots last week left three people dead.

Dear Lianeke | Trans

"I call on Albanian citizens who want to honour the victims of state terror with flowers and silence to take part in the homage [rally] on January 28," Rama said during a press conference on Wednesday.

"Albanians who want to place flowers against barbarity and fascism should attend," he added.

Rama's call comes amid international appeals to cancel the rally due to the heightened political tension that has gripped the country since last Friday's clashes between opposition protesters and security forces.

EU envoy Miroslav Lajcak, dispatched to Tirana on Wednesday to mediate the crisis between the opposition and the ruling majority, called on both sides to avoid any actions that could further increase the level of confrontation, including holding further rallies.

Meanwhile Prime Minister Sali Berisha said that he cancelled plans to hold an anti-protest on Saturday.

"The United States welcomes the prime minister's decision to cancel the rally. It was statesmanlike and it was the right thing to do. I spoke by phone with the prime minister a short while ago and I told him this," US Ambassador to Tirana Alexander Arvizu said in a press conference.

"I find it extremely regrettable that Mr. Rama has indicated that he intends to proceed with the rally on Friday. I strongly urge him to reconsider his position," he added.

Arvizu has held several meetings with both Berisha and Rama in an effort to convince them to cancel the rallies, and this has been backed by phone calls from the US Undersecretary of State Philip Gordon and public statements by US Deputy Secretary for Europe and Eurasia, Tom Countryman.

"There are no winners in this situation; there are only losers among the political leaders, for the people of Albania and for Albania's image in the European Union, which it is striving to join," Countryman said in an interview for VOA.

"The continued attempt to turn a losing situation into a winning situation simply risks more violence," he added.

Last Friday's riots broke out when several hundred protesters attacked the police barricade set up to protect the prime minister's office, using sticks, stones and Molotov cocktails, and police responded with tear gas, a water cannon and later with live ammunition fire to disperse the crowd.

The group of violent protesters threw rocks and set several cars on fire as they clashed with police. Another group of protesters, estimated at 20,000 people, demonstrated non-violently on Tirana's main boulevard.

Berisha's ruling Democratic Party and the Socialist opposition, headed by Tirana mayor Edi Rama, have been locked in a power struggle since the end of the June 2009 parliamentary elections.

The Socialists allege that Berisha stole the elections through voter fraud, while the ruling majority rejects the accusations as baseless and maintains that the polls were the best the country has ever held.

Friday's anti-government protests were called by the opposition following the publication of video which allegedly shows two government ministers discussing corrupt deals.

How Global Elites Forsake Their Countrymen

Those in power see people at the bottom as aliens whose bizarre emotions they must try to manage.

1093 COMMENTS

This is about distance, and detachment, and a kind of historic decoupling between the top and the bottom in the West that did not, in more moderate recent times, exist.

Recently I spoke with an acquaintance of Angela Merkel, the German chancellor, and the conversation quickly turned, as conversations about Ms. Merkel now always do, to her decisions on immigration. Last summer when Europe was engulfed with increasing waves of migrants and refugees from Muslim countries, Ms. Merkel, moving unilaterally, announced that Germany would take in an astounding 800,000. Naturally this was taken as an invitation, and more than a million came. The result has been widespread public furor over crime, cultural dissimulation and fears of terrorism. From such a sturdy, grounded character as Ms. Merkel the decision was puzzling—uncharacteristically romantic about people, how they live their lives, and history itself, which is more charnel house than settlement house.

Ms. Merkel's acquaintance sighed and agreed. It's one thing to be overwhelmed by an unexpected force, quite another to invite your invaders in! But, the acquaintance said, he believed the chancellor was operating in pursuit of ideals. As the daughter of a Lutheran minister, someone who grew up in East Germany, Ms. Merkel would have natural sympathy for those who feel marginalized and displaced. Moreover, she is attempting to provide a kind of counter-statement, in the 21st century, to Germany's great sin of the 20th. The historical stain of Nazism, the murder and abuse of the minority, will be followed by the moral triumph of open arms toward the dispossessed. That's what's driving it, said the acquaintance.

It was as good an explanation as I'd heard. But there was a fundamental problem with the decision that you can see rippling now throughout the West. Ms. Merkel had put the entire burden of a huge cultural change not on herself and those like her but on regular people who live closer to the edge, who do not have the resources to meet the burden, who have no particular protection or money or connections. Ms. Merkel, her cabinet and government, the media and cultural apparatus that lauded her decision were not in the least affected by it and likely never would be.

Nothing in their lives will get worse. The challenge of integrating different cultures, negotiating daily tensions, dealing with crime and extremism and fearfulness on the street—that was put on those with comparatively little, whom I've called the unprotected. They were left to struggle, not gradually and over the years but suddenly and in an air of ongoing crisis that shows no signs of ending—because nobody cares about them enough to stop it.

The powerful show no particular sign of worrying about any of this. When the working and middle class pushed back in shocked indignation, the people on top called them “xenophobic,” “narrow-minded,” “racist.” The detached, who made the decisions and bore none of the costs, got to be called “humanist,” “compassionate,” and “hero of human rights.”

And so the great separating incident at Cologne last New Year's, and the hundreds of sexual assaults by mostly young migrant men who were brought up in societies where women are veiled—who think they should be veiled—and who chose to see women in short skirts and high heels as asking for it.

Cologne of course was followed by other crimes.

The journalist Chris Caldwell reports in the Weekly Standard on Ms. Merkel's statement a few weeks ago, in which she told Germans that history was asking them to “master the flip side, the shadow side, of all the positive effects of globalization.”

Caldwell: “This was the chancellor's . . . way of acknowledging that various newcomers to the national household had begun to attack and kill her voters at an alarming rate.” Soon after her remarks, more horrific crimes followed, including in Munich (nine killed in a McDonald's) Reutlingen (a knife attack) and Ansbach (a suicide bomber).

The larger point is that this is something we are seeing all over, the top detaching itself from the bottom, feeling little loyalty to it or affiliation with it. It is a theme I see working its way throughout the West's power centers. At its heart it is not only a detachment from, but a lack of interest in, the lives of your countrymen, of those who are not at the table, and who understand that they've been abandoned by their leaders' selfishness and mad virtue-signalling.

On Wall Street, where they used to make statesmen, they now barely make citizens. CEOs are consumed with short-term thinking, stock prices, quarterly profits. They don't really believe that they have to be involved with “America” now; they see their job as thinking globally and meeting shareholder expectations.

In Silicon Valley the idea of “the national interest” is not much discussed. They adhere to higher, more abstract, more global values. They’re not about America, they’re about . . . well, I suppose they’d say the future.

In Hollywood the wealthy protect their own children from cultural decay, from the sick images they create for all the screens, but they don’t mind if poor, unparented children from broken-up families get those messages and, in the way of things, act on them down the road.

From what I’ve seen of those in power throughout business and politics now, the people of your country are not your countrymen, they’re aliens whose bizarre emotions you must attempt occasionally to anticipate and manage.

In Manhattan, my little island off the continent, I see the children of the global business elite marry each other and settle in London or New York or Mumbai. They send their children to the same schools and are alert to all class markers. And those elites, of Mumbai and Manhattan, do not often identify with, or see a connection to or an obligation toward, the rough, struggling people who live at the bottom in their countries. In fact, they fear them, and often devise ways, when home, of not having their wealth and worldly success fully noticed.

Affluence detaches, power adds distance to experience. I don’t have it fully right in my mind but something big is happening here with this division between the leaders and the led. It is very much a feature of our age. But it is odd that our elites have abandoned or are abandoning the idea that they belong to a country, that they have ties that bring responsibilities, that they should feel loyalty to their people or, at the very least, a grounded respect.

I close with a story that I haven’t seen in the mainstream press. This week the Daily Caller’s Peter Hannon reported that recent Syrian refugees being resettled in Virginia, were sent to the state’s poorest communities. Data from the State Department showed that almost all Virginia’s refugees since October “have been placed in towns with lower incomes and higher poverty rates, hours away from the wealthy suburbs outside of Washington, D.C.” Of 121 refugees, 112 were placed in communities at least 100 miles from the nation’s capital. The suburban counties of Fairfax, Loudoun and Arlington—among the wealthiest in the nation, and home to high concentrations of those who create, and populate, government and the media—have received only nine refugees.

Some of the detachment isn’t unconscious. Some of it is sheer and clever self-protection. At least on some level they can take care of their own.

This chart here below is a poll run by ABC news yesterday, which shows Hillary not only behind Trump, it shows her behind two of the three third party candidates as well. This poll is not an anomaly or fluke; it simply shows things how they are when the censors get caught off guard. No doubt Russia has run these polls on American soil also to get the truth, and knows beyond a doubt something is seriously amiss in the United States. The fact that this is the real truth when you see it against the back drop of lies being told stands as solid proof America is a failed state that should be feared. The burial of truths this big, which requires an entirely corrupted media, happens ONLY in failed states.

Needless to say, of course, they pulled their little girl away from that day care centre the very same day the new trainees were to start their substitution jobs there, officially saying she was not "very well" or stating some other non-confrontal explanation why she wouldn't show up in order to keep her away from that nursery until their vacation starts in July. Notice: Swedish police underpaid, undermanned and under pressure

More border controls, rising gang crime, low salary and under supplied: Eight of ten police officers in Sweden according to an actual survey are thinking about quitting their jobs. Since beginning of the year 240 of them have already hung their job on the nail. Now for lack of applicants the application conditions have been changed.

For 13 years Erica Bäckiu was a traffic policewoman in Sweden, then she quit. She wasn't earning 3,000 euros in the month in addition to more and more work and more and more pressure:

"It didn't get better as I had hoped, actually. It became worse and worse all the time. And this is especially due to the fact that enough people are not there."

Since beginning of the year 240 police officers have already hung the job on the nail; these are 60 percent more than in the comparison period of the year before. And these become even more. According to an actual survey eight of ten police officers are thinking about giving notice. Ex-Minister of Justice Beatrice Ask of the middle-class-liberal "moderate" party criticizes the government and accuses them of idleness:

"Up to now the Minister of the Interior Ygeman has bet on the fact that the police will handle everything. But obviously this does not function. We see that more and more police officers are quitting. We know that there is discontent and we have areas in which the police must be stronger than it is today. "

Police officer in Sweden - the pure nightmare job

There are really about 50 "No Go areas", especially, in suburbs, problem areas with extremely high crime in which normal patrols do not dare to enter. In addition, since January there are more border controls to dam the refugee stream. They this requires about 20,000 Swedish police officers just at the time that gang crime rises in Malmö where at the moment almost every night the cars burn and there are repeatedly brutal murders. Then there are the low salary and a restructuring process which provide for a lot of insecurity. Police officer in Sweden - this is the pure nightmare-dream job. According to Andreas Lövstrand of the police trade union:

"We see that the people leave us for another job. Then less people must do the same amount of work. And it leaves us more and more work and more and more officers think about leaving. It's a vicious circle. We are underpaid and undermanned, must work a lot and under greater and greater pressure."

The Government doesn't feel responsible

And the red-and-green government? It points with the finger at the middle-class party predecessors. Minister of the Interior Ygeman of the Social Democrats sees the plight, but he does not feel responsible for it:

"We took over the police household and the personnel strength from minister Ask and then gave to the police immediately more resources. I am of the opinion that this is not still sufficient. So we will give to the police even more money and establish the sum in the autumn budget."

It's time see whether this happens and if so, in which amount. In another area, Ygeman was active long time ago, even if he does not talk with pleasure about it. For lack of applicants the Swedish police a few weeks ago changed the application conditions. Now you don't have to be intelligent to have a complete chance a chance, or as one officially says: Applicants with "less theoretical potential and a lower ability in the problem solution." are applying.

Here is a New World Order globalist (of Khazarian ethnicity?) who is responsible for the Muslim mass migration into (former) "civilized" and peaceful western countries like Sweden:

How sick must this Muslim immigrant be to pose like this in front of a witness with a cell phone camera!

A father of a young girl had to arm himself with a rebar to chase away a "newcomer" who had approached his 5 y/o daughter and shown his genitals before he started to masturbate in front of her in the little, former pastoral, town of Rättvik (located in the province of Dalarna) which has been "blessed" with an asylum camp.

A 36 y/o Arabic football trainer is now indicted for sex offending of three teenage girls at the inauguration of Gothia Cup in Göteborg.

The man, who is a trainer for a Moroccan team, had allegedly together with about 40 players surrounded the three girls, kissed them and pawed their bottoms and breasts. One of the girls states that the man pushed his tongue into her mouth.

"I promise and swear by Allah's name that I didn't do it."

(Sheer "taqqiya" from a "taharrusher" not worthy to be called a man!)

JT: He was emulating Muhammad! There must be something dead wrong with their Muslim genes.

All nineteen "hankier-pankiers" taken into custody last year at We are Stockholm festival last year were young migrants, predominantly young boys from Afghanistan and street kids from Morocco. The twentieth case that led to apprehension by police was an elderly man/photographer of Swedish descent who took "close up" pics of girls document on-going molestations? <http://www.friatider.se/samtliga-tafsare-pa-we-are-sthlm-var-invandrare>

Corresponding figures for similar police apprehensions have doubled (and counting) at this year's still on-going We are Stockholm festival. <http://www.friatider.se/polisen-minst-dubbelt-sa-manga-sexofredanden-pa-arets-we-are-sthlm>

The political parties that make up the Swedish government [Socialist Democrats + Moderate Party (liberal conservatives)] are supported by less than 26% of the Swedish voters if the communists (Vänsterpartiet left party) and feminists [Fi (Feminist-social)] are excluded.

Keep up the good work! Now that's really grass-roots support!!!

At <https://www.thereligionofpeace.com/attacks/attacks.aspx?Yr=Last30> we read this list. Islam is Olympic! So many murders in so few days! These goals are Muhammad's goals. Islam is truly the emulation of Muhammad's actions. Of course, Muhammad stated that Allah took responsibility for everything. Allah is so perfect. Allah killbar!!! Allah killbar!!!
