

The Trump Cabinet

My good friend Jim Campbell, of Dancing Czars/A Charging Elephant, has astutely suggested that Sarah Palin would make an excellent Secretary of the Interior in the next administration (<http://dancingczars.wordpress.com/2011/04/03/double-your-pleasure/>). Jim's proposal got me thinking about some of the other positions in the next presidential administration and how they would best be filled. My modest proposals follow:

President: Donald Trump

Vice President: Congressman Allen West (R-FL)—because he is a great American, a military combat veteran, a man who understands what it means to uphold the U.S. Constitution, and someone who will make black voters feel less guilty about abandoning Obama.

Department of Agriculture: to be eliminated, along with all subsidies to farmers—who should be busy raising livestock and growing food and animal feed, not diverting corn to ethanol to “stop global warming.” (Senator James DeMint (R-SC) will be in charge of dismantling the department.)

Department of Commerce: to be eliminated—because American businesses don't need federal assistance; they need the federal government to get out of their way. (Senator Rand Paul (R-KY) will be in charge of dismantling the department.)

Department of Defense: General David Petraeus.

Department of Education: to be eliminated—because education is a local issue, and taxpayers in one state should not be forced to fund education in other states. (Congresswoman Michelle Bachmann (R-MN) will be in charge of dismantling the department.)

Department of Energy: to be eliminated—drill, baby, drill.

Department of Health and Human Services: Senator (and physician) Tom Coburn (R-OK).

Department of Homeland Security: former New York Mayor Rudi Giuliani—provided he fires all TSA employees, gets rid of airport scanners, and institutes a passenger profiling policy.

Department of Housing and Urban Development: to be eliminated—because we don't need taxpayer-funded public housing or interference in the real estate market; those who cannot afford to buy houses can remain renters. (Because Trump knows real estate better than anyone else, the choice of the person in charge of dismantling this department is best left to him.)

Department of Justice: J. Christian Adams, former civil rights lawyer for the Justice Department, who has worked valiantly to expose Obama's racist attorney general, Eric Holder.

Department of Labor: eliminate this department—and let someone else generate phony statistics on their own dime.

Department of State: former Ambassador to the United Nations John Bolton.

Department of the Interior: former Alaska Governor Sarah Palin—who will be a good steward of the nation's natural resources, while selling off the acreage we don't need to help pay down the national debt.

Department of the Treasury: Congressman Ron Paul (R-TX)—to ride herd over the Federal Reserve Board chairman Ben Bernanke.

Department of Transportation: Jay Leno, because he knows and loves cars and won't demand that everyone drive electric scooters.

Department of Veterans Affairs: Colonel Oliver North (U.S. Marines, retired).

Office of Management and Budget: Congressman Paul Ryan (R-WI).

National Labor Relations Board: Wisconsin Governor Scott Walker.

Immigrations and Customs Enforcement: the National Guard and the United States Army.

Federal Communications Commission: Rush Limbaugh.

White House Press Secretary: Ann “pull no punches” Barnhardt (see <http://westernrifleshooters.blogspot.com/2011/04/barnhardt-moves-to-front.html> and <http://barnhardt.biz/>)

Ambassador to the United Nations: Alan Keyes, former Ambassador to the United Nations Economic and Social Council and Assistant Secretary of State for International Organizations.

Ambassador to Indonesia: Barry Soetoro (Barack Hussein Obama Soetoro Obama, or “BHOSO”).

Ambassador to Kenya: Michelle Obama.

Ambassador to the North Pole: Obama's closest advisor, Valerie “slum lord” Jarrett.

Style czar: Carla Bruni, the First Lady of France (who Michelle Obama hates because of her beauty, style, and thin frame).

Trump's first Supreme Court nominee: Judge Robert H. Bork—as a tribute to Ronald Reagan, and to piss off leftists everywhere.

Trump's second Supreme Court nominee: Mario Apuzzo (attorney for Commander Charles Kerchner, of Kerchner v. Obama)—because he knows and respects the U.S. Constitution far more than Sonia Sotomayor or Elena Kagan.
